Loops are used to iterate the code a specific number of times until the specified condition is true. The key difference between lists and tuples is that tuples are immutable. Java 8+ Cheat Sheet Format: OnlineWebpage This cheat sheet is based on Cay Horstmann's lecture (who has written more than dozen of programming books for students and professionals). For instance, while using apps, people are concerned about their functionality and not their code. 3. Inheritance. Inheritance provides the concept of reusability; it is how objects of one class (Child class or Subclass) inherit or derive properties of objects of another class (Parent class). Types of Inheritance in Java: Single Inheritance: The child class inherits properties and behavior from a single parent class. Multilevel Inheritance: The child class inherits properties from its parent class, which in turn is a child class to another parent class. Multiple Inheritance: When a child class has two parent classes. There are three kinds of the loop in Java: For Loop Iterates the code a specific number of times until the condition is true. class TestForLoop { public static void main (String args[]) { for(int i=0;
